WOODBURY ACADEMY.

THE Trustees of the Woodbury Academy, in the county of Gloucester, New-Jersey, have the satisfaction to inform the numerous patrons of that institution, that they have engaged the Reverend Thomas Pilton, to be the principal, and to take upon himself the charge of the above seminary of learning, and that the school will be opened on Monday the tenth inst.

Among the exercises taught here, will be the English, Latin and Greek languages, gramatically.—Reading, Writing and Arithmetic in all its branches; Stenography, Geometry, Geography and the use of the Globes, Navigation, Surveying, &c.

This institution was formerly under the care and direction of the Reverend Andrew Hunter, and the same attention to the education and morals of the youth, which under him so highly distinguished it, will be pursued with unremitting endeavors, by the present principal and duly attended to by the trustees.

The town of Woodbury is situated on an high and elevated spot: It is airy, pleasant, and remarkably healthy, and is but nine miles distant from the City of Philadelphia.

Parents, guardians and others, who are disposed to send their youth to this place, will find exceeding good, decent and comfortable boarding and lodging, and upon reasonable terms.

BROTHER JONATHAN'S

NEW SONG.

I WONDER what the matter means,
A cutting of such capers;
The Parson says the French are mad,
He read it in the papers.

HORUS.

Heigh ho! Billy Bow,
I b'lieve the war's a comin;
'N if it does, I'll get a gun
Soon as I hear them drummin.

He says as how they steal our ships,
Wherever they can get 'em;
But 'fags if I was one o' the folks,
I guess I'd shoot and hit 'em.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

An' father says they told him poz,
When he was down to Boston,
They took a swinging sight of goods;
Now I forget the cost of 'em.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

I think it's darned wrong, be sure,
Because we us'd 'em clever;
An' uncle vows a sailor works
Much harder than a weaver.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

But rot 'em all, if that's their cut,
May hap they'll come an' rob us:
An' so we'd better drive 'em off,
Before an' they can grab us.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

An' Debby talks, if I will go,
She'd wait a year to marry;
Tho' I'm afraid to wait so long,
For fear of that there Harry.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

An' I heard 'em say, a training day,
That Washington's a goin;
An' Cap'n Toby swears they'll fall,
Like grass when he's a mowin.
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

He said, that once, in t'other war,
He run right at the bullets,
An' never minded grenadiers
No more than we do pullets,
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

But, duece, I'd rather stay at home,
A making wall an' haying;
An' so have done, I guess;
I s'pose there'd be no [illegible]
Heigh ho! Billy Bow, &c.

Communications.

THE Congress of the United States have again convened. It is to be hoped that the present session, like the last, will be marked with strong and decisive measures. The attention of Europe is directed, in no small degree, to the conduct of this country. America has acquired great reputation from the noble firmness of her President, and the enthusiastic ardor of her youth. The wise and vigorous laws which were enacted during the last session of Congress have contributed, likewise, to give importance to her name. I trust the national legislature will be anxious to encrease the influence and respectability of their country. If this disposition sincerely actuates them, they will speak the language of candor and truth; they will treat with contempt and indignation those shameless professions of moderation with which the infamous tyrants of France are endeavoring to amuse and deceive. In our Chief Magistrate we may safely repose an unbounded confidence. The indignant language in which he speaks of the wrongs of his country, and the zeal with which he urged the vindication of her honor, mark a firmness of spirit from which every thing is to be expected in the hour of danger. The French directors know that the Chief Magistrate of America can neither be intimidated by threats, nor corrupted by intrigue. He perfectly understands their policy.—He knows that they can be haughty; and that they can be mean. Americans! Venerate the illustrious man who presides over the destinies of your country. He deserves all your admiration, gratitude, and love. The Senate of the United States is entitled, likewise, to your highest confidence. A majority of its members have steadily supported the honor of their country. It is on the House of Representatives that the infamous partizans of France place their hopes of success. And, indeed, the independent American is forced, with shame, to confess that a large proportion of its members have been the tools of a foreign power. Did not a shameless faction in that House seize every opportunity to excuse, to palliate, to justify the conduct of France? Did not one of its leaders* openly declare that the differences between the two republics had all arisen from the scandalous conduct of the American Executive? After the publication of the dispatches these men were obliged to change their language, and to confess that France had acted improperly.—But still they cried, that peace might be preserved if irritating measures were avoided. Base and abandoned traitors! Look at the hirelings in the Council of Berne, who sold their country, and you will see in them a faithful image of yourselves. Like you they recommended mild and soothing measures. Like you, they declared that peace might be secured, if nothing was done to irritate. Like you, they talked of the purity of their motives, and of their anxieties to avert the calamities of war.

The leaders of the faction know perfectly well the object which France has in view, and the means which she employs. They are not ignorant that she is aiming at universal dominion, and that professions of friendship are the instruments on which she places her greatest hopes of success. If, then, they have not conspired against their country, why did they oppose every energetic measure? The law for raising an army—the law for protecting our trade—the law for dissolving the treaty with France—the law for capturing French armed ships, were all opposed by the faction with the utmost perseverance and zeal. Alas! what would have been our situation had these men prevailed?—French privateers would still have plundered our trade; they would still have scoured our coast; they would still have insulted us in our bays and rivers.—The demands of tribute would still have been urged;—Apologies for the speech of the President would still have been insisted on as the preliminary of all negotiation. What effect would all this have produced on the public mind? The feelings of patriotism would have been extinguished.—The sentiment of national honor would have ceased to be felt or valued. Yes, my fellow citizens, to this situation would your country have been reduced, had these men succeeded in their views. But, under the blessings of heaven, their schemes were baffled, and a wise and noble policy was pursued.—Our trade is protected.—The American flag floats in triumph on the ocean, and not a French robber dare shew himself on our coast. Washington has left his retirement, and has taken the command of the armies of his country. The feelings of patriotism have been kindled, and that mercenary spirit has vanished which would ballance the expences of war against national dishonor.——The conduct of our government has produced, likewise, the most happy effects in Europe. It is a noble example to those countries which have submitted to insults and injuries. It has taught them that force is the only weapon by which they can preserve their honor, and that safety is to be acquired only by speaking and acting boldly. Legislators of America!—persevere in this wise and magnanimous course of policy. Forfeit not the reputation which your country has acquired. I do not address myself to the leaders of the faction.—It would be in vain to talk to men whose hearts have long since been dead to the feelings of patriotism. They will continue to be faithful to their masters. If any firm measures are proposed they will declaim on the pacific disposition which France has lately exhibited, and conjure the House not to blast the fair prospect that is beginning to open on the country. Yes, fellow-citizens, the Genevese and his followers will be impudent enough to attribute the late measures of the directory to sincere and virtuous motives. Do you think this impossible? I refer you to a speech which he delivered in the House of Representatives after the dispatches had been published. He represented it as highly improper to make known the communications from our commissioners. He declared that the Senate, in publishing them, had taken a step which would inevitably involve the country in a war. He said he entertained hopes that our differences would yet be adjusted, but that the Senate, by that rash measure, had rendered it impossible. Nay, he went so far, on one occasion, as to assert, that the corrupt propositions mentioned in the dispatches did not appear to have come from the directory, but to have been entirely the work of unauthorised agents. What may we not expect from a man who can make such declarations as these?

But the faction will not be contented with opposing future measures of energy.—They will make a violent effort for the repeal of the wise laws that have already been passed. The sedition bill will, probably, be the first thing that will call forth their zeal. Here they will exert their utmost powers. They will talk of liberty—of the constitution—of the freedom of the press.—They will tell the people and the state governments, that they ought not to remain inactive—that their dearest rights are invaded—and that nothing will save them from despotism, but an immediate and powerful interference. This is what their agents have been doing in every part of the country. And they have had too much success in deceiving and poisoning the public mind. If they prevail in their effort against the sedition bill, they will then endeavor to repeal the one concerning aliens. And here they will cant about the sacred trial by jury. It is of the highest importance to France that the President should be deprived of the power of sending dangerous aliens out of the country. She has conquered more by her agents than by her arms. Intrigue has first divided the people whom she has subdued, and then her ferocious soldiers have completed what treachery had begun. If this law is repealed, the agents of the directory may work under the very eyes of the government, and laugh at its weakness. Should the faction triumph in this attempt, it will then attack the law for raising an army. And here its orators will declaim on the enormous taxes that oppress the people. They will tell us of the states whose liberties have been destroyed by standing troops, and they will represent the militia as sufficient for every purpose of defence. After this they will call in and dismantle the armed ships. Yes, my countrymen, this is the course which the faction would wish to pursue, and nothing will prevent them from making the attempt but a perfect conviction that it will fail of success. Indeed, if they think they can disturb and alarm the public mind by declamations on these subjects, the certainty of defeat will only make them more violent in their propositions and their harangues.

Nothing can save us from ruin, but a firm and vigilant administration. It is time to speak openly and boldly. There is an absolute connection between the directory and the abandoned leaders of a faction here. Am I asked for my proofs? I refer to their constant apologies for the conduct of France; to their persevering efforts to keep the country disarmed; to the mission of the envoy Logan. Few persons can be so stupid as to believe that this man went to France entirely of his own accord. It can be proved that Jefferson was extremely intimate with him just before his departure. And at what time did he fail? Shortly after the publication of the dispatches when the faction saw their dearest hopes in the greatest danger of being blasted by that glorious enthusiasm which fired the American breast. A change of conduct on the part of France was absolutely necessary, and Dr. Logan was dispatched to instruct the directory how to deceive and manage his country. They treated him with the greatest attention, and their official journal represented him as the envoy of the French party in America. He was said in the Paris papers to have passports signed by Jefferson and M'Kean, and to carry letters from Jefferson to Merlin and Talleyrand. Thus we have positive proof of a coalition between foreign enemies and domestic traitors. Americans! be vigilant—Mark the leaders of the faction well—Watch all their motions, for they can assume a thousand forms, and practise a thousand deceits.

ARISTIDES.

Princeton, Dec. 3.

* NICHOLAS.

THE intelligence of a peace at Rastadt, if not actually home-spun, has received a peculiar "form and pressure," from the cabalistical efforts of a party whose wishes are invariably hostile to the tranquility and security of the universe. We have, however, every substantial reason to discredit it. All the information upon which the report relies amounts merely to this, viz. that at the date of the last advices from Rastadt the negociation wore a conciliatory and accommodating aspect. That the commissioners of the empire were disposed to concede to the imperious and dishonorable conditions of the French republic, is not apparent: Nor is it more obvious, that the latter were inclined to relinquish their demands—Where then are to be found, reasons to induce a belief that this wavering and disgraceful negotiation is at length terminated? When we know also that every fresh courier from Vienna or Paris gives a different complexion to their proceedings? Besides, certain events have since taken place which will materially affect the disposition of all parties in this Congress. The house of Austria, trembling for her existence, will have perceived, before she consummated a treaty which stipulates her own disgrace, and secures her future annihilation, the ambitious projects of her adversaries frustrated in all quarters, the marine of France expiring; and the strength of her ancient ally, whom she basely deserted, daily rising in magnificent superiority over the seas. The account of these events must have reached the plenipotentiaries at the moment when those of the empire were deliberating on the cession of the left bank of the Rhine, and must of course have given an important bias to their decision. This decision it is to be hoped, has been the signal for the renewal of a continental war, on the occurrence of which the friends of religion and rational liberty may congratulate themselves, as the infallible precursor of the total downfall of that detestable system in France, which has given birth to a catalogue of enormities unparalleled in history.

But even should the reverse of this have occurred;—should the empire have acquiesced in the disgraceful terms of the Republic;—have agreed to open a door for the admission of a democratic-jacobinnal propaganda, and thereby sanctioned the dissolution of her unwieldy, disjointed constitution—the world has nothing to apprehend. The success of this new villainy will only protract a little longer the duration of the Republic. Great Britain, forsaken by her allies, is alone equal to the overthrow of her enemy. In the north and east, however, a host of powerful auxiliaries is arising; the issue of whose joint operations will at once restore order and tranquillity to the world, and reflect everlasting infamy upon those powers who, from a pusillanimous policy, were induced to fall off from a war, for the continuance of which they had every motive of interest as well as duty.

AN ORATION,

Pronounced July 4, 1798,

At the request of the Inhabitants of the Town of BOSTON, in commemoration of the anniversary of American Independence.

By JOSIAH QUINCY.

"The inroads upon our public liberty, call for reparation—The wrongs we have sustained, call for—Justice. That Reparation and that Justice, may yet be obtained, by Union, Spirit, and Firmness. But to divide and conquer was the maxim of the Devil in the garden of Eden, and to disunite and enslave hath been the principle of all his votaries from that period to the present."

Late Foreign News.

BASLE, 23 Thermidor.

The following article has been publiſhed here, and forms the ſubject of converſation in every quarter. It is a note which citizen Zeltner, our plenipotentiary at Paris, has tranſmitted to the miniſter of foreign affairs with a requeſt to communicate it to the Directory. The language which it holds does honor to the courage of the man by whom it is employed.

Our miniſter, after recapitulating the vexations which certain French commiſſaries have exerciſed in Switzerland, adds—

"The conſequences of a conduct ſo irritating ought to be ſeriouſly apprehended from a people who are neither diſtracted by pleaſure, nor to be intimidated by force, and with whom gentleneſs alone will ſucceed. It is exceedingly impolitic not to ſtudy their character better, and to act towards them as if they poſſeſſed that happy thoughtleſſneſs with which the French adopt novelties, the apathy of the Batavians, or the docile pliability of the Italians.

This irritable and courageous people adhere firmly to their religion, to their democracy, and to their ancient manners. Every thing which bears the ſtamp of infidelity and oppreſſion, fills them with indignation and reſentment. When they have nothing more to loſe, when they are driven to deſpair, they are capable of every exceſs, and Helvetia may become the theatre of ſcenes ſtill more horrible than thoſe of La Vendee. The underſigned trembles to uſe this language, but it is his duty to employ it. Not to unveil to the French Directory the whole truth were a crime.

The Griſons have already diſcovered a diſpoſition to decline all connection with us, on hearing of the deplorable ſtate into which Switzerland is plunged. They prefer a yoke which formerly inſpired them with horror. The chains of the Tyrol are riveted. Suabia, on the point of embracing the ſyſtem of liberty, rejects it with diſdain. Thoſe who formerly had ſworn to propagate it, now appear to oppoſe it with all their might; and the neighbours of Helvetia refuſe with horror fruit which ſeems poiſoned.

The true republicans of Helvetia will be the firſt victims of ſo great diſorders. The towns, the only ſupport, the only aſylums of the new order of things, will be expoſed to the fury of the inhabitants of the country, who accuſe them of having cauſed their miſery and ruin, by giving the firſt impulſe to the revolution. Upon them will fall the firſt ebullition of their frantic rage. The Engliſh conſider themſelves as protected from the reſentment of the Great Nation, becauſe the latter allows uſeful neighbours to tear their own vitals, and allows her enemies to avail themſelves of the moſt valuable advantages. Situation, hiſtory, experience; every thing proves the importance of this neighbourhood to France; every thing excites the enemies of France to unite themſelves with a brave and eſtimable people, whoſe fate at preſent inſpires ſuch general intereſt."

The miniſter plenipotentiary concludes with the following demands on the part of the Helvetic Republic:

1. That the funds of every denomination which have been ſequeſtrated, or which have been taken from the Helvetic nation, ſhould be reſtored to its new government, to enable it to meet the expenſes of its revolution; to organize an armed force which may render the Helvetic republic worthy of an alliance with the French republic; to pay for articles of the firſt neceſſity which France may furniſh to Switzerland; ſuch as grain, ſalt, &c. &c.

2. That the different parts of Helvetia in which contributions have been laid, ſhould be exempted from them.

3. That the artillery, arms, magazines, and in general every thing taken from the Helvetic nation, ſhould be reſtored to the conſtitutional government.

4. That the number of French troops in Switzerland, eſpecially cavalry, be reduced to what ſhall be abſolutely neceſſary; and that theſe troops evacuate the country as ſoon as poſſible.

5. That the conſtitutional government of the Helvetic republic be favored in every poſſible way, in the exerciſe of its authority; and for this purpoſe it is neceſſary,

That orders be given to the agents of the French government in Helvetia to take meaſures, in concert with the Directory of the latter power, upon every point in which it is concerned, to act only in its name, with its conſent, of ſerving it at the ſame time all the reſpect which is due to it:

That the French troops which remain in Switzerland be auxiliaries; that inſtead of traverſing the operations of the government, they ſhall ſupport it; that they ſhall aſſiſt it as often as required;

That the advantages given to the Canton of Berne reſpecting the maintenance of troops, be extended to all Helvetia.

From the LONDON HERALD.

The ſplendid victory gained over the French fleet, may very probably produce the moſt important conſequences of any one event ſince the commencement of the preſent war. Whether we connect this event with the preſent ſtate of independent nations, or with the ſtate of thoſe unfortunate people who are now groaning under the power of France, or with the ſtate of the interior of France itſelf, it is calculated to produce very important effects.

With regard to the interior of France, it is more than probable it will haſten a change that is evidently approaching. Vain and fond of military glory, the French at all times have puſhed ſucceſs too far, and when once the current has fairly ſet in againſt them, they have loſt all that energetic enthuſiaſm, which ſwelled the ſucceſs it had occaſioned. Louis the Fourteenth was the terror of Europe; and the glory he acquired by the brilliancy of his victories, render'd him abſolute maſter of the lives and fortunes of his ſubjects; but no ſooner was that luſtre tarniſhed by a reverſe of fortune, than all enthuſiaſm, and energy, abandoned the French nation; and the man whom till then they adored as a conqueror and almoſt as a God, they began to deteſt as an extravagant prodigal, who had waſted their blood and treaſure to gratify vanity and whim. The latter years of the Grande Monarque were as much imbittered by the neglect, bordering on diſguſt, that he experienced from his ſubjects, as his proſperity had been increaſed by their praiſe and adulation.

The efforts of France ſince the revolution have all, except the expedition to Egypt, had ſome pretext beſides that of ambition (though, indeed, frequently a very bad one) but the invaſion of Egypt was merely the efforts of ambition run mad. Alexander or Charles XII never attempted a wilder experiment; and Don Quixotte who was a private madman, on his own account, never embarked more uſeleſsly in any project.

The pomp and parade of learned men, and the great expence attending the expedition, ſhew that it was intended to prolong national enthuſiaſm, and gratify French vanity; for even the directory could not aſſign any better motive than avenging a few French merchants, and ſubduing rebellious Beys, with whoſe allegiance they had no kind of connection, and from the ſovereign of whom they could expect no thanks.

We may fairly conſider this diſaſter as the ſhipwreck of French vanity, and therefore the exertions, the unanimity, the tameneſs of the nation, are probably at an end. An exploſion in the interior may probably take place; but even if it ſhould not, the directory will no longer be able to delude the nation; and in future, whatever they may have experienced, they may expect from an oppreſſed people—curſes deep mouth'd.

In the interior ſuch will naturally be the effect; and we hope that France, now that the dream of glory is at an end, will no longer be ſupportable to herſelf, or formidable to her neighbours.

Again—As to the conquered people of Holland, Switzerland, Italy, and Flanders, they will feel the yoke doubly galling and the burthen heavier than ever; and while their ſuffrance is augmented, the fears inſpired by the invincible armies of the Great Nation will ceaſe, when they contemplate the folly and humility of their maſters!—Part al rev lt wi l then probably change to general inſurrection, and France will then be reduced to its former limits again.

As to the independant nations, they will ceaſe to regard with terror, madmen who have only hitherto owed their ſucceſs to the daring boldneſs with which they have advanced, and their want of regard to every kind of principle, for to ſuch, we maintain, the Great Nation owes its ſucceſs.

A general league will more eaſily be formed, not for attack, but for defence, againſt the moſt unprincipled men that ever haraſſed the peace of nations; and, therefore, we may have ſome hopes of peace, impracticable with that ambitious nation, ſo long as thoſe others, who ought to have joined in demanding it, have been reſtrained form fear and apprehenſion of danger.

Such are the political effects naturally reſulting from a change of opinion, founded on a change of circumſtances; but the certain effects are to this nation ſafety; the total ruin of the now diminiſhed French navy, and the impoſſibility of attacking our poſſeſſions in India, of revolutionizing Turkey, or of making war, on Naples, and taking the iſland of Sicily. The Mediterranean will now be again free, and Malta will not long remain in poſſeſſion of its preſent maſters; for the ſuperiority gained by ſea is already ſo great, that France has no alternative but to keep its ſhips at home, or to be beaten in every engagement.

Philadelphia, dec. 4, 1798 cotf

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA,

THURSDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 6.

The following is in alluſion to ſeveral late addreſſes from Virginia, ſetting forth that the power of providing for the general welfare is veſted in each ſtate reſpectively.

MEMORANDUM FOR DECEMBER 1798.

That the conſtitution of the United States of America, the bulwark of our happineſs as a people, be uniformly and efficaciouſly maintained—that the ſacred contents be not violated by uſurpation and tyranny on the one hand, nor the power of the people delegated to their repreſentatives in congreſs miſcontrued and abridged on the other—that in article the 1ſt, Section the 8th, power is given to congreſs "to provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States"—that in the 15th Section a further power is given "to ſuppreſs inſurrections, and repel invaſions"—that in article the 4th, ſection the 4th, congreſs engages "to guarantee to each ſtate individually a republican form of government, and to protect each of them againſt invaſion and alſo againſt domeſtic violence, and it is to be obſerved that this power is given to the executive if the legiſlature cannot be conveniently convened."

That the 18th ſection of article the 1ſt is thus expreſſed—"To make all laws which ſhall be neceſſary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers veſted by this conſtitution in the government of the United States or in any department of office thereof." Hence we find full power given to congreſs to make all laws from time to time which may be deemed expedient and neceſſary for the ſafety, peace and happineſs of the community at large—That the power of providing for the common defence and general welfare of the country is expreſsly prohibited and taken from each ſtate reſpectively by the 10th ſection of article 1ſt, where it is enacted "that no ſtate ſhall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation, grant letters of marque and repriſal, &c. and further prohibits (without the conſent of congreſs) each ſtate from keeping troops or ſhips of war, or entering into any agreement or compact with any other ſtate or with a foreign power, or to engage in war, &c."—which indiſputably prevents each ſtate from arrogating to itſelf a power to provide for its common defence and general welfare;—this power then is expreſsly given where it ought to be, namely, to the congreſs of the United States, the repreſentatives, guardians and ſervants of the people.

That to obviate all doubt and miſconſtruction of any particular clauſe, the true meaning and intention of forming the conſtitution may be ſeen from its preamble, which is thus written: "We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, eſtabliſh juſtice, inſure domeſtic tranquility, provide for the common defence promote the general welfare and ſecure the bleſſings of liberty to ourſelves and our poſterity, do ordain and eſtabliſh this conſtitution for the United States of America." Here we have the very ſpirit of our conſtitution fully and unequivocally expreſſed, previous to the inſertion of each particular clauſe further comment thereon is therefore altogether unneceſſary. That proviſion has conſtantly been made in the conſtitution of the beſt governments which have ever exiſted under particular circumſtances, and eſpecially, in caſes of rebellion or invaſion, to make encroachments on itſelf—That the diſtinguiſhed characters convened together to form the conſtitution of the United States of America, wiſely adopting and purſuing meaſures by which alone the conſtitution itſelf can be preſerved for any length of time in article the firſt, ſection the ninth have enacted that "The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus ſhall not be ſuſpended, unleſs when in caſes of rebellion or invaſion the public ſafety may require it." That therefore in caſe of invaſion or rebellion, this, the happieſt privilege of a free people, the conſtitution itſelf holds expedient to be ſuſpended, that the legiſlature may adopt whatever meaſures its wiſdom may judge expedient for the preſervation of the people and country—That therefore, whenever the public ſafety require it, the people, by their repreſentatives in Congreſs, may enact any law which may be judged expedient for its preſervation and that of the lives and property of the people.

That the Alien and Sedition bills are perfectly conſiſtent with and agreeable to the ſpirit and intention of the conſtitution.—That the ſaid bills ought to remain and be in full force and virtue ſo long as the threatned danger exiſts, which gave occaſion for their birth.—That when neither internal or external danger prevails, and the public ſafety do not require the aid of ſaid Alien and ſedition bills they may and ought to be repealed. That oppoſition and reſiſtance to ſubordination and good order, reſpect for the conſtituted authorities, and eſtabliſhed laws of the land has increaſed, is increaſing and ought to be diminiſhed. That therefore all the good citizens of the United States of America, private as well as public characters, be held in requiſition to repel and reſtrain this hydra of many heads, and which too like Proteus can appear in as many ſhapes, as it requires indeed an Herculean arm, to demoliſh and eradicate its baneful effects.—That taking the embargo off American veſſels, by the French republic, as well as every other act of that nation, ſhort of a general inveſtigation of the injuries we have ſuſtained, and a candid and unequivocal determination, fully evinced on their part to make good the ſame, is to every intent and purpoſe, a mere diſplay of that boaſted diplomatic ſkill we have the greateſt cauſe moſt cautiouſly to guard againſt.

VIRGINIUS.

CONGRESS.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES, THIS DAY, a Meſſage was received from the Senate, by their Clerk, informing the Houſe, that a quorum of the Senate were aſſembled, and in the abſence of the Vice-Preſident of the United States, they had choſen the Hon. JOHN LAWRENCE, Preſident of the Senate, pro-tem.

Agreeably to the uſual order, a joint committee was then appointed by both houſes, to wait upon the Preſident, to inform him that a quorum of congreſs being aſſembled, they were ready to receive any communication which he might think proper to communicate.

This Committee conſiſted of the following members: viz. from the Senate, the Hon. Meſſrs. Read and Paine, and from the Houſe of Repreſentatives, Meſſrs. Dana, Harper and Venable; who, having performed the duty aſſigned them, reported, that the Preſident would make a communication to both Houſes of Congreſs, on Saturday next, at 12 o'clock, in the Repreſentatives' Chamber; and that his preſent indiſpoſition was the occaſion of deferring till that time, the propoſed communication.

The houſe then adjourned till Saturday morning 11 o'clock.

STATE LEGISLATURE.

Both Houſes of the State Legiſlature aſſembled yeſterday afternoon, purſuant to adjournment, and proceeded to elect their reſpective Speakers, when Robert Hare, Eſq. was choſen for the Senate, and Cadwallader Evans, Eſq. was choſen Speaker of the Houſe of Repreſentatives. The Senate appointed a committee to inform the lower Houſe, that they were organized and ready to proceed to buſineſs.

A letter from Hamburgh of the 25th Sept. contains the following paſſage:—"I learnt this moment that General Koſciuſko has been arreſted here, at the requeſt of a foreign Court."

Prince ADAM PONISKY, CI-DEVANT Treaſurer of the Crown, and Grand Prior of the Order of Malta, died at Warſhaw on the 4th Auguſt. His revenue, for near twenty years, was almoſt half a million. He had reſided ſome time before his death with a poor peaſant, a few miles from Warſhaw; but expired in the houſe of an old ſervant in the ſuburbs, who had taken him in out of compaſſion, and to ſhield him from the perſecution of his creditors.

Gazette Marine Liſt.

New York, Dec. 4.

From the Brig Betſey's Log Book.

Arrived brig Betſey, Wm. Doak, maſter, in 30 days from St. Bartholomews. Sailed in company with the ſhip Two Siſters, Capt. Follenſbe, bound to Newburyport—parted with him in a gale of wind. Lat. 34, N. Long. 78, W. ſpoke an Engliſh brig, Wm. Roſs, maſter, from New Providence bound to London, 13 days out. Oct. 22, in lat. 38, 25, long. 74, 10, ſpoke the brig Jay, of Boſton, Joſhua Atkins maſter, from Grenada bound to Boſton. The conduct of our fraternal friends is not unlike the Frenchman's wife, "All worſe and no better." They ſtill continue to plunder Americans——A gentleman arrived at St. Bartholomews from Guadaloupe a few days before the Betſey ſailed, reported that American veſſels were daily brought into that place—and ſhared the fate of condemnation, under pretence of our frigates capturing their privateers. Our ſeamen are treated with the utmoſt contempt—they are all impriſoned, kept on an allowance of four ounces of ſalt fiſh for 24 hours, with a ſcanty ſupply of bread. The Orange of Kennebeck, capt. Halman, from Barbadoes bound to Kennebeck, was captured by a French privateer from Guadaloupe, ſent into St. Martins and condemned.

Capt. James Burdick of the ſloop Aurora, from George-Town, S. C. on Monday the 26th of Nov. ſpoke the ſloop Regulator, of N. London, capt. Smith, 10 days out from N. York, bound to Norfolk—all well.

Yeſterday arrived, Ship Active, captain Story, 65 days from Hamburg—Left there,

Ship Iris Nelſon,
Waſhington, Foſter,
Roſe, ——,
Apollo, Thurſton,
Brig Betſy, Chatfield,
Mary, ——,
} of Baltimore,

Sailed in company with ſhip Diana, captain White, of New-York; brig Sally, captain Avis, of Boſton, and ſeveral other Americans. October 8, parted with the latter near the Orkneys then 11 days from Hamburg. Spoke ſchooner Caroline, Edward Tyler, from Oporto, bound to Boſton 32 days out, in lat. 40, 58, long. 47, 30.

The following veſſels had arrived at Liverpool, from America, on the 27th of September.

Liberty, E. Bray, from Philadelphia; Merchant, T. Fitzgeral, from Maſſachuſetts; Sally, Stoddert, from do.—Sailed, Sept. 13th, Venus, Sprague, for Maſſachuſetts; 14th, Packet, Trott, do. Hiram, Stitt, Nova Scotia, Lucretia, Seaburgh, South-Carolina; 22d, Swan, Woolburn, New-York.

American veſſels advertiſed at Liverpool on the 29th September.

The ſhip Joſeph, Stone, for charter daily expected to arrive, and to ſail immediately for Baltimore; ſhip Waſhington, G. A. Foſter, for Norfolk and City Point; ſhip Rebecca, Corran, greateſt part of her cargo engaged; for New-York, ſhip Alliance, (late Wood) David Jewell, would be ready for ſea by the 1ſt of October; for Boſton, ſhip America, Nathaniel Chadwick, ready for ſea early in October; daily expected to arrive and to ſail immediately for Baltimore, ſhip Union, John Chammings; for Philadelphia, ſhip Liberty, Elkanah Bray; for New-York, brigantine Houlbroke, Stephen Macey, to ſail in 14 days; for New-York, ſhip Caledonia, Francis Mallaby, to ſail in few days, with one or more armed ſhips; for Norfolk, ſhip Warren, John Fawn; for Boſton, ſhip Sally, Henry Stoddard, ready for ſea by the 6th of October; for Boſton, ſhip Accepted Maſon, Ephraim Delano, to ſail in all September; for Norfolk, ſhip Minerva, Wyvill, to ſail the beginning of October; for New-York, ſhip Two Brothers, Cummins, and the Cambridge, Nevin, both well armed.

I beg leave to recommend the following very intereſting ſummary of recent events to the attention of my ſubſcribers. It has been tranſlated for this Gazette, from a letter in an important periodical work, publiſhed in Lower Saxony, of ſo late a date as the 26th of September. As it is of conſiderable length and detail, it is impoſſible to compriſe it one publication; it will, therefore, be continued through different papers.

"Lower Saxony, 26th September, '98

"I was miſtaken, Sir, in ſuppoſing that a ſea belongs to that Power which combines the advantages of governing on its coaſt, of poſſeſſing the beſt fortreſſes, and the power of excluding an enemy from its ports. Every ſea belongs to the nation whoſe marine is moſt powerful, whoſe officers are moſt ſkilful, and which has Nelſons to command them. Should other fleets affect to uſurp its empire, ſhe holds the power to puniſh their temerity; and the very harbours, wherein they believe themſelves ſecured from her vengeance, ſpeedily become the theatre of their diſgrace and ruin.—Such are the facts incontrovertibly eſtabliſhed by the gallant Nelſon.

The ſhips of war deſtined to protect the moſt important expedition that has been undertaken for ages; thoſe ſhips, which left their own harbors with ſuch a ſhew of ſucceſs and eclat; which reached their deſtination without obſtacle, and landing the future conqueror, of Egypt and India at Alexandria, appeared in the road of that port, to defy the flag and power of the Britiſh navy;—all theſe ſhips were no ſooner diſcovered, than they were attacked and annihilated—and Nelſon might ſay

* "Je n'ai fait que paſſer, ils n'etoient deja plus."

But you are about to aſk me what becomes of the conquerors of Egypt and India? will they not be exterminated on the very ſoil of which they already believe themſelves maſters?—In fact they ſeem deſtined to a fate ſtill more miſerable than that of their fleet.—theſe men who had triumphed over the greateſt generals, and the moſt diſciplined armies, are doomed the victims of ſome ſavage ſatraps.

Such is the fatal reſult of ignorance and preſumption—The fleet of France has been loſt through the ignorance of the Directorial ſailors—and if Buonaparte periſhes in Egypt, he falls the victim of an extravagant preſumption. (To be continued)

* I did but paſs them, and they ceaſed to be.

GEORGE DAVIS'S LAW-BOOK STORE,

No. 319 High Street,

Latest London & Irish Editions.

GEORGE DAVIS's Fall importation is now arranged of which a more capital collection he believes was never offered for sale either in this City, London or Dublin. It combines almost every book in, with several valuable books out of print. Davis's confining himself to the sale of Law-Books only, it will appear obvious to professional Gentlemen, the advantages they have both in selection and price by purchasing from him.

His Catalogues being ready, gentlemen will particularly oblige him by calling for them—and to those residing at a distance, by favoring him with their address (post-paid) they shall be sent.

A CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

JOHN A. SHAEFFER, of Philadelphia, who has for a few years past been in the southern States, has had the effrontery to draw several Bills of Exchange on Timothy Pickering, Esq. Secretary of State, and myself, and by that means has defrauded a number of persons of their money, deceiving them by an exhibition of letters and papers with the names affixed of divers public characters and reputable merchants highly recommendatory of said Shaeffer; to one of these papers I find my name subscribed, but I do not know the man; these are villainous forgeries! To prevent further imposition, I have to request the printers of Newspapers in the United States to publish this for the benefit of their fellow-citizens. SAMUEL MEREDITH,

Treasurer of the United States.

Trenton, New-Jersey, October 24, 1798.

To be Let,

AND POSSESSION GIVEN
